

“Orizzonte 2026”

The IOR’s conference series for clients achieves full attendance

The series of sessions organized by the Istituto per le Opere di Religione (IOR) for its clients, titled “Horizon 2026 – Building today the choices of tomorrow: investment solutions and opportunities,” concluded successfully, with more than 200 clients in attendance.

The series, organized by the Client Area with the support of the Asset Management Area, took place over five days in November. Its objective was to present to clients the main economic themes for 2026 that may influence investment decisions, as well as the updates to next year’s product offering.

In particular, the program included sessions dedicated to examining the performance of financial markets in 2025 and the trends expected to shape the global macroeconomic environment in 2026, with a focus on key investment themes. Clients were also offered an overview of the IOR’s Asset Management solutions and a preview of the new developments coming next year, including the launch of the fund-based asset management service.

Each day also featured three Q&A sessions, during which IOR experts made their expertise available to participants.

Through this initiative, the IOR renews its vocation of service to the Church and reaffirms its commitment to supporting clients by fostering greater financial awareness, in line with the ethical mission that distinguishes the Institute.
